

My TV recommendation is the programme 'A Perfect Planet' by The BBC and David Attenborough.

It has the perfect blend of educating and entertaining.

Each episode shows fantastic images of how of different species of life work and interact with each other. The camera angles and how they show different walks of life in their natural habitat are brilliant.

Even if learning about the natural world isn't something you are particularly interested in, I would still recommend this as in my opinion anything that David Attenborough works on is fantastic! And hopefully after watching it you will look back on other projects of his and enjoy them too!
