Virtue of the Week – LOVE OF LEARNING

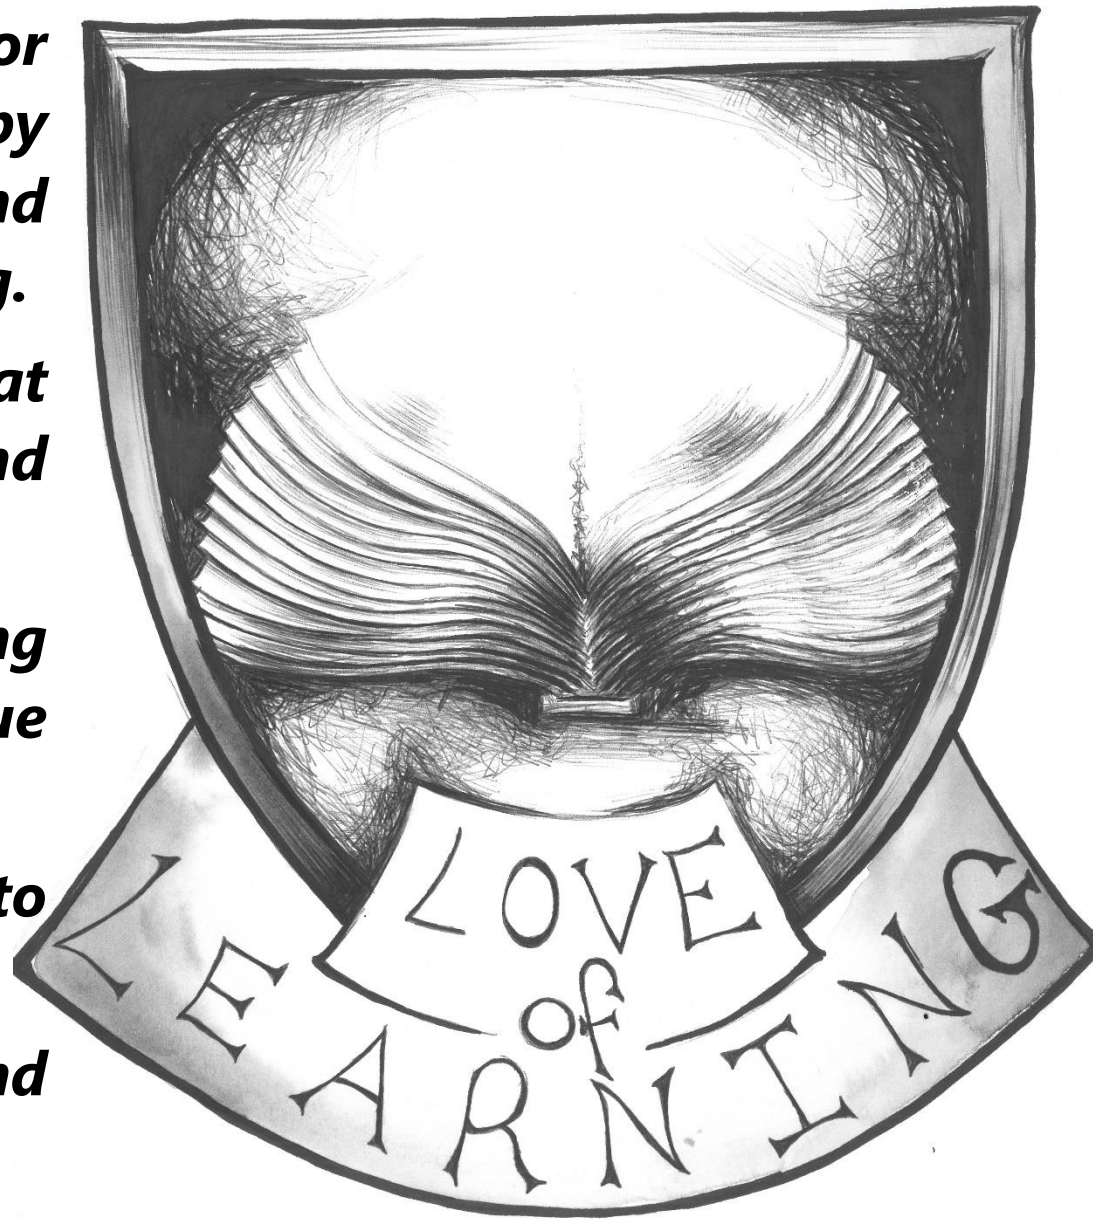

“Let the wise hear and increase in learning, and the one who understands obtain guidance.” (Proverbs 1:5)

You might be awarded a love of learning virtue for doing things like:

- Showing effort and enthusiasm
- Producing good quality work
- Completing additional / independent work

- You have a desire for knowledge and are happy learning new things and growing in understanding.
- You are attracted by what is worth knowing and away from what is not.
- You give time to learning and you seek what is true and what is good.
- You do not give time to rumour or gossip.
- You are open minded and open to change.

Oldest known library in the world.

Who

THE LIBRARY OF ASHURBANIPAL

What

FIRST FIRST

Where

IRAQ (MOSUL)

When

668

The oldest known library was assembled by Ashurbanipal, King of the Assyrians, between 668 and 631 BCE. It was located in his royal palace in Nineveh (in present-day northern Iraq, near Mosul), and included some 30,000 clay tablets, inscribed with cuneiform writing. While earlier royal archives have been discovered (notably at Ebla in present-day Syria) the Library of Ashurbanipal is the first to represent a concerted effort to collect and organize literary texts that have no practical purpose to the running of a centralized state.

The School Library

Knowledge

*To develop this virtue let's consider the re-development of our school library. Watch the clip and consider why it is important to read and how we can action this virtue through being a part of our school library. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=L-POJhwxw1yY>

Reasoning

1. Express/share your experiences linked to reading and libraries.
2. In your view what should a school and or a community library include or aim to do?
3. Why are libraries so important? Are they outdated? (Internet)

Practice

1. As a form discuss how the library space could support your school experience.
2. On a sheet of paper mind-map/collate your ideas.
3. Put forward your name to be a part of the library leading group.
